Subject: Whois inaccuracy

Hi Jamie,

First, apologies for my delay in responding to your email below. I appreciate you pointing me to the blog and report, both of which I read with interest. Thanks.

Second, I have concerns--and even criticisms--about ICANN compliance. But please, please know that those concerns and criticisms are not directed at you either professionally or personally. To the contrary, I have always been grateful for your straightforwardness in answering questions and your down to earth nature. I worry that what I (and others) perceive as ICANN Org backing away from its role as a joint controller of WHOIS data is and will continue to undermine its ability to enforce rigorously accuracy requirements.

I don't know if you listened in to the CSG session with the Board today, but I and others expressed some of these concerns.

Thanks, as always, and I hope we will get the chance to see each other in person in the near future (that is if you are still willing to put up with me).

Best regards,
Dean
